

MainPodcastForumsF.A.Q.Archives/LibraryResourcesAccounts

September 3, 2026 at 12:53pm - Welcome, guest. Please Login or Register

Hi guest! Thank you for visiting the U&U forums. This year we completed a major upgrade to the forum software along with a design refresh. We're slowly rolling out the new features, so tune in every month to see what's been newly added! We are also accepting Registrations for new users. Registering allows you to see all posts, and make posts yourself. Even though the U&U podcast is on an indefinite hiatus, our community is still thriving and we're excited to meet new people. We promise we don't bite! Please reach out to forum administrators lizpony or clay_andersen if you need any assistance.

Forums > Anomalies > Extranormal Events >

[DELISTED] I Found Evidence Of My House Spinning

 lincoln1988 ·  Monday July 6, 2026 at 5:31 PM ·  #evidence #story #images #video

Wednesday March 20, 2019 at 5:58pm

 0

"I've only ever been able to see her turning left."

"Look at just her foot, tay." The other girl leaned over. She covered most of the spinning dancer illusion with her hand. "Imagine the foot going right. You're all lefty-loosey and you gotta get righty-tighty. Lock in!"

"Ok sure, I can see it with just the foot, but—"

"—Now I'm gonna blow your tits clean off." Slowly, she lifted her hand off the screen. She revealed nothing new, and yet it had completely changed.

lincoln1988
Neophyte

 Sunday July 12, 2026 at 2:35 PM

 #1

First of all I want to thank the forum admins for keeping this place running. I used to listen to U&U back in high school and was on these forums back then as a lurker. Now that I've got something to share I'm sure glad this place is still around since I do NOT know where I'd post this otherwise.

This is the story of the most inexplicable thing to ever happen to me. It still keeps me up at night, just rolling it around in my head as I fail to make it make sense. This is the story of how I took a video from inside a recurring dream.

This story starts in 2023 while I was living in the house of a long-time internet friend, who I will call Jamie. I normally live in Somerville MA, but I moved out to suburban Springfield because he gave me a good deal on rent. He subleases his house to enough people that he had to get creative with how the rooms are used. For instance, my bedroom was actually a converted closet. It was long and thin, with a bed on one end and a large window on the other. Despite its size, it was very cozy, and I really enjoyed living there.

One downside was the room would sometimes get extremely hot. It was east-facing, so you'd get slammed in the face with the sun every morning. I had to put-up some cheap blackout blinds over the window just to sleep properly. They helped with the sun, but only marginally with the heat. It was a sauna in there some nights.

The heat was probably the cause of my strange recurring dream. For some reason this dream was my brain's reaction to being overheated, and I'd invariably have it during those extremely hot days. During heat waves I'd have the dream almost every night.

In this dream I'm lying in bed and the house is spinning counter-clockwise. I'm just there in bed, staring out the window at the opposite end of the room, watching the world outside slowly pass by. That's all the dream was. I could see, behind the desk and computer monitor and blackout blinds, the view outside ceaselessly shifting along eastward to northward to westward to southward and back again and again. The world slowly drifting right, about one spin every minute.

Usually in the dream it was early morning, just after the sun had started to rise. The sunlight would bound around the room, sneaking in through the bottom-half of the window as our bearing passed south, south-east, east, north-east. Basking in those warm beams for several seconds before plunging again into that dim cool morning light.

I'd lie there, watching it go on for what felt like hours. Mesmerized and dizzy. I'd never know what to do, and I was never be able to get out of bed. Eventually I'd wake up, and every time I'd be drained and nauseated and soaked with sweat in my overheated bedroom.

This brings me to the one time my already weird dream got weirder. There was a single night when my recurring dream diverged from the normal pattern. I remember when it happened, early August 2023, because it was during a particularly stressful time in my life where I had to spend a bunch of time going to government offices, jumping through bureaucratic hoops with the help of my housemate Paula.

But enough of that, on to the dream. As usual the house was spinning, spinning, spinning, etcetera. But after a while I started hearing the doorbell ring from the opposite end of the house. I barely even registered it happening. I was totally out-of-it, just watching the world pass me by. Too dizzy to get-up and answer. I just kept lying there. Then it rang again. Over and over again.

The person ringing the doorbell was really going at it. They started banging on the front door. They started yelling at me.

"STOP SPINNING!"

It was an woman's voice, strained with fury.

"STOP SPINNING THE HOUSE!"

She kept going on and on. Ringing the doorbell and banging on the door and screaming:

"YOU'RE NOT ALLOWED TO SPIN THE HOUSE!"

"STOP SPINNING IT!"

"STOP IT! STOP IT! STOP GOD DAMMIT!"

In hindsight, it's a hilarious image. I can just imagine this person out-front on the covered porch, clinging to the beams so she's not flung off. Screaming and screaming for me to stop this crazy thing, like I had any control over it.

But at the time, in the dream, I was petrified. This person was so angry, her voice whipped-up with this wretched unearthly animal rage. I was terrified she'd get into the house and rip my head off.

Somehow I managed to reach for my bedside table, for my phone. I had it in my mind that I'd call someone for help. But I couldn't make it past the lock screen. I couldn't remember my password. I kept trying different unlock patterns but none of them worked. The woman at the front was only getting louder and louder. I was desperate for something, anything to save me.

And then, well, I don't remember. I think I started to wake up, and the dream started breaking down. Everything came back to normal when I woke, sweating, in my too-hot room. And that was that.

Fast-forward again to November 2025. I'd moved back to Somerville to live in a shared apartment. My old phone was really starting to fall apart so a friend gave me hers as a hand-me-down. The new phone had this feature where it can automatically copy all my files and settings from the old phone. I didn't have any files because I always delete them, but I thought "why the hell not" and did it anyway.

Once it was done copying things over I discovered a pictures folder called "NFRAMETHUMBS" that was totally FULL of pictures copied over from the old phone. Like, hundreds and hundreds of pictures. They were all small low-quality thumbnail versions of every picture I'd ever taken on my old phone, even those I had deleted. Here's an example, it is a picture of my desk back at Jamie's place that I took right after moving in:

I spent the afternoon looking through the pictures. I was really invested in searching through them since my old phone had once reset itself back in 2019, deleting a bunch of important photos. So I was hoping some of those had survived.

There were also thumbnails for deleted videos. These thumbnails were different screenshots from the video, arranged in a five-by-two grid. I figured out that the frames are arranged in order from right-to-left and top-to-bottom. It goes 1 2 3 4 5, then the next row, then 6 7 8 9 10.

Here's a random example:

They were all pretty boring. But then I found something strange. Thumbnails for a video that I don't remember taking. It was clearly shot from my bed at Jamie's place, looking toward the window. The room is totally dark inside, and you can only see the silhouettes of the blinds, the desk and chair, and the computer monitor. Behind all that, through the window, is the outside world. I darted my eyes between each of the ten surviving frames, trying to make sense of what I was looking at.

Here's the picture:

Every frame has a different view. The outside world was spinning.

You can see that after the sixth frame, the camera zooms-in on the window. You can better make out what's outside, but even with the zoom it's hard to see what's happening. I'll do my best to explain it.

In frame number seven you can see where the white fence of the backyard is split into two sections by a tan-brick post. Above the fence are the leaves of a big tree. In the next frame, frame eight, you can see what's just to the left of the previous: a gap in the trees and the now-uninterrupted white fence. In frame nine there's another different tree. Then, in frame ten, you can see the side of the north-east neighbour's house. You can see the frame of their window slide into view.

See my notes below:

Aside from frame seven, every single one of these pictures would be impossible if the house wasn't spinning. I wouldn't be able to see the side of the neighbour's house from my room unless I stuck my head in the window and really craned my neck, let alone from the bed. In frame six you can make out a car down the road. You can't even see down the road from that window because the trees and fences are in the way!

It's pretty hard to understand what's going on when just looking at the grid. I wanted to be able to see it animated, so I turned it into a GIF. Hopefully this helps make it clearer:

I don't have any idea how long the video was originally, so I picked a random speed for the animation. But based on the filename it was taken August 6th 2023 at 8:23 AM. That was the same week as my bureaucratic fiasco and the weird version of the dream. The one with the doorbell and the woman yelling at me. The dream where I reached for my phone but couldn't unlock it. It could've been the same day. I never wrote down when it happened.

As you can imagine I completely failed to make sense of this. It defied all logic. After a solid week of frantically trying to figure this out, I eventually gave up because I got distracted by other life stuff. Once the confusion was no longer acute, this whole strange affair became relegated to just some fun story I tell to friends.

lizpony

✧ Guardian ✧

Monday July 6, 2026 at 5:44 PM

#2

lincoln1988 has PM'd us additional details, per our sensitive evidence policy. Please treat this with the same respect as you would any other credible sighting of an unexplained phenomenon.

2

1 gegel

Neophyte

 Monday July 6, 2026 at 6:45 PM

#3

~~I think it's clever that you scaled down your pictures so we can't tell if they are AI.~~

Point taken.

"I think we are in rats' alley, where the dead men lost their bones."

4

1 lizpony

✧ Guardian ✧

Monday July 6, 2026 at 6:19 PM

#4

On July 6, 2026 at 5:59 PM gegel said:

I think it's clever that you scaled down your pictures so we can't tell if they are AI.

Like I said already lincoln1988 shared additional evidence to prove her claims. Me and the rest of the validation committee are satisfied with the additional proof. This additional evidence contains potentially identifying information, so cannot be shared publicly:

- Screenshots of Google Satellite and Street View showing the house.
- Additional picture thumbnails of the bedroom where the anomaly took place.

lincoln1988 also provided screenshots of the "file details" menu for the images she shared. These have modification dates consistent with her story. I've attached these since they do not contain identifying information.

In future I prefer that you reach out to me privately in PMs with your concerns.

Attachments (4)

SCREENSHOT20260630174404.png (1.14 MB)
SCREENSHOT20260630174458.png (541.5 kB)
SCREENSHOT20260630174520.png (1.04 MB)
 3 1 1 0630174744.png (244.5 kB)

Reggie42
Wanderer

Monday July 6, 2026 at 6:28 PM #5

Christ almighty, this really quite the find. The pictures are pretty darn convincing. Your gif reminds me of the view out the window of a moving train. As far as I can tell there probably is not an easy way to fake this except with CGI or AI. I'll trust the validation committee for now but lets all keep a level head and not get too optimistic. My condolences for all those things that happened, I know how hard life can be.

AadarshVarma
Neophyte

Monday July 6, 2026 at 7:01 PM #6

This is a total trip. Your description of the dream was actually making me dizzy haha. Thanks for posting.

The resolution of the video is so small I don't understand the geometry so is there any chance you can draw a diagram of what you think is going on?

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Monday July 6, 2026 at 7:43 PM #7

On July 6, 2026 at 7:01 PM AadarshVarma said:

The resolution of the video is so small I don't understand the geometry so is there any chance you can draw a diagram of what you think is going on?

Ok this is totally my bad. I did draw a diagram a while ago and I was going to post it but it completely slipped my mind.

Here's a general map of the house and surrounding area. I've drawn the position of my room in the house with a dotted rectangle. The black object inside is the approximate location of me and my phone.

Next I went and added-in all the camera views. I tried to match up each frame with the surroundings, assuming that each frame is equally spaced in the rotation to make it easier for me.

concrete
Wanderer

Monday July 6, 2026 at 8:09 PM

 #8

Woahhhh thats strange. Excited to see the explanations and theories ppl come up with.

On July 6, 2026 at 5:31 PM lincoln1988 said:

The heat was probably the cause of my strange recurring dream. For some reason this dream was my brain's reaction to being overheated, and I'd invariably have it during those extremely hot days. During heat waves I'd have the dream almost every night.

I had a similar thing happen to me, except it happens when my place gets really cold. I keep having this dream where I'm reliving this documentary I saw when I was a kid about a bunch of mountaineers dying on Everest. I always know what's going to happen but I'm never able to save anybody from their fates. Buncha people left and right dropping like flies to hypothermia. I can't watch that documentary anymore, too many bad memories.

My threads, discussions, and other projects:

- Concrete's Curated List of Matrix Glitches
- Photoshop Tennis Thread
- Concrete's Web Zone

eggbuoy
Boatman

Monday July 6, 2026 at 11:41 PM

 #9

We might have the real deal on our hands here, boys and girls. Fucking incredible stuff.

The risk I took was calculated, but man, am I bad at math.

Tuesday July 7, 2026

packrat
Village Idiot

Tuesday July 7, 2026 at 4:58 AM

 #10

Fascinating evidence. Here is my 2¢

One of three things are happening.

1) There is a real life explanation for the footage. Could be people moving things around outside. Any chance you were pranked? Someone could have put a television in front of your window. Also, rotating buildings are not impossible. Revolving restaurants are very common. But building them is not trivial and I doubt it can be made so discreetly that not even the inhabitants can tell. IMO we can safely rule that out.

2) The house, despite being a normal house, is anomalously spinning. I'm imagining a cylindrical rotating space-time anomaly centered on the house going down into the foundation. Even if that happened, it would mess with your pipes and electrical, and those would have to be fixed somehow. There is an "adjustment bureau" which swoops into action after anomalous events to put things back to how they were. Maybe these agents deleted the video off your phone, but missed the thumbnail. If that's the case, we should all be expecting a visit from them sometime soon.

3) Your phone "slipped into" your dream. There have been reports, even on this forum, of objects and people slipping in and out of dreams. This is especially common during "dream wars." These are wars between people on a level beyond even actions or words. These wars are played on psychic terrain. The book "Electric Kool Aid Acid Test" describes them well and how they play out. They are battles of will between group minds. Your situation fits the profile.

My money is on option 3. It is more consistent with your dream recurring. I would rule out option 2 because the space-time warping would need to happen multiple times. Anomalies are usually one and done.

Yours,
Packrat

Every jumbled pile of person has a thinking part that wonders what the part that isn't thinking isn't thinking of

ZigarettenAutomat
Acolyte

Tuesday July 7, 2026 at 7:31 AM

#11

coool

AadarshVarma
Neophyte

Tuesday July 7, 2026 at 12:11 PM

#12

Thanks for the diagram. Frames 9 and 10 are the smoking gun imho. You can see the bottom of a window frame shift to the right. All the other frames could be anything really but frame 9 and 10 are the only ones where I can actually recognize something actually moving.

I want to believe this because this is just so weird and cool but I'll put on my scepticism hat.

You could be misrepresenting the geometry and your room is actually looking south toward the street and then movements of the window could be maybe cars driving by. Or maybe like packrat suggested it is a television propped against your window or maybe a long sheet of paper with a panorama printed on it being moved past the window.

On July 7, 2026 at 4:58 AM packrat said:

Also, rotating buildings are not impossible. Revolving restaurants are very common. But building them is not trivial and I doubt it can be made so discreetly that not even the inhabitants can tell. IMO we can safely rule that out.

Bro it is actually so funny that you rule out a physically spinning house and then right after bring up a space-time anomaly. Isn't it more plausible that the house was actually spinning in real life than a literal wormhole attack?

Idk tbh scepticism is making us all sound like idiots and we're grabbing straws. Taylor don't listen to us, you should tell your friends the story they're not gonna think your stupid. Even if they think you're stupid they'll probably still be your friends.

meterlong
Neophyte

Tuesday July 7, 2026 at 6:12 PM

 #13

Hello there. Someone made a Reddit thread for this event over on r/Paranormal. There's some interesting discussions.

https://www.reddit.com/r/Paranormal/comments/38xar71/phone_video_captures_recurring_dream

Wednesday July 8, 2026

packrat
Village Idiot

Wednesday July 8, 2026 at 4:58 AM

 #14

On July 7, 2026 at 12:11 PM AadarshVarma said:

Bro it is actually so funny that you rule out a physically spinning house and then right after bring up a space-time anomaly. Isn't it more plausible that the house was actually spinning in real life than a literal wormhole attack?

Elementary, my dear Varma. How many times did Taylor here dream of the spinning house? Enough for it to be a recurring nightmare. Enough for it to happen every night during a heat wave. Let's put the number at 10.

This house would need to spin 10 times on 10 different nights, timed perfectly to be only when Taylor here is sleeping. If it ever spins while she's awake, the jig is up.

All of her friends would have to be in on the secret. The neighborhood would have to keep the secret. The jig is up the moment it hits the local Fox news affiliate. Can't you see the red on white chyron? "THIS HOUSE IN SUBURBAN SPRINGFIELD IS BUILT TO SPIN." Any reporter on a slow news day would be chomping at the bit for this scoop. Lurching forward like so many zombies thirsty for human interest stories.

Like I said, anomalies are one and done. The longer something outrageous must go on, the less likely it becomes. I posed option 2 for completeness sake but it is also ruled out by this criteria. Option 3 is the real winner.

Every jumbled pile of person has a thinking part that wonders what the part that isn't thinking isn't thinking of

yolololo
Neophyte

Wednesday July 8, 2026 at 4:44 PM

 #15

there's barley any proof in this thread. we need proof so we can know this isn't a hoax. pls send high res pictures of the room and house where this occurred. and surrounding area. so we can corobberate what you're saying with real life proof.

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Wednesday July 8, 2026 at 6:34 PM

 #16

Hey @yolololo, I don't have any high-res pictures of my bedroom or the house because I have a habit of deleting my photos. I have some low-res ones from the NFRAMETHUMBS folder but the mods advised me not to share them, because they contain things that could pinpoint the house's location. I won't be sharing pictures from street view because I don't want the internet to know where I'm living.

I'll probably be able to take additional photos after I move in on Friday. I'll ask the mods for help with making sure those pictures can't identify me.

AadarshVarma
Neophyte

Wednesday July 8, 2026 at 6:51 PM

 #17

Yeah Taylor be careful because you can get doxxed if you share too much proof. It's happened some times before :(

yolololo
Neophyte

Wednesday July 8, 2026 at 7:20 PM

 #18

ok but how are we supposed to verify this is real if there is no proof. I don't get why a website dedicated to investigating unexplained anomalies doesn't care about being fooled by easy hoaxes. these pics are so low res its funny

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Wednesday July 8, 2026 at 9:57 PM

 #19

I somehow missed this when it was first posted. very interesting!

random question I can't get out of my head, if your room got so hot why not just use a window AC unit?

also also, I wanted to see a stablized version of the video, since the gif taylor posted bounces around so much. so I used my photoshop skillz to align the layers and make my own gif. I also figured out a way to estimate how long it should be. based on the diagram taylor posted earlier, it seems that the frames correspond to 1/3 of a rotation. she said earlier that, in the dream, it felt like "About one spin every minute." so that implies the video was 1/3rd of that time, so 20 seconds.

enjoy!

100 5

2

2

PM yolololo said:

I don't get why a website dedicated to investigating unexplained anomalies doesn't care about being fooled by easy hoaxes.

privacy and safety is more important than the search for truth. I'd rather not see a repeat of season six...

Understair
Acolyte

Wednesday July 8, 2026 at 10:23 PM

#20

Weevil's GIF makes it easier to see the lighting change over time. The way the sun moves over the side of the desk reminds me a lot of time lapses. Like the sun is rising. Maybe it's just a really long video?

There is also this thing called the "Sydney Opera House illusion." There was a VSauce video about it. Basically, if you look at something through a window that is far away from you, that something can appear much larger than it actually is. If you then move toward the window, it will seem to shrink. It could be whatever was moving outside was actually not very big at all. I think the quality is so poor that this could be anything. To be honest, I can't make out the car the OP claims is in frame six.

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Wednesday July 8, 2026 at 11:01 PM

#21

On July 8, 2026 at 10:23 PM Understair said:

I can't make out the car the OP claims is in frame six.

I don't have any problem seeing it. here's a sketch I made over it. does that help?

2

1

Thursday July 9, 2026

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 12:13 AM

#22

On July 8, 2026 at 9:57 PM lesser_weevil said:

random question I can't get out of my head, if your room got so hot why not just use a window AC unit?

The room didn't have enough power outlets for both my computer and an AC, and Jamie said I shouldn't use a power bar because it could cause a fire.

Reggie42
Wanderer

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 8:48 AM

#23

On July 8, 2026 at 10:23 PM Understair said:

There is also this thing called the "Sydney Opera House illusion." There was a VSauce video about it.

Never heard of this before, thanks! Also Packrat's and Aadarsh's ideas about televisions or banners in front of the window, that won't work. The TV or banner would need to emitting a lot of light to be lighting up the room so well. And nevermind that, it doesn't explain the way the light changes like Understair points out. I did some time in the film industry and my opinion is that either this is CGI or AI or I agree with Understair that there are objects being moved outside the window. The lighting changes can be caused by "bounce boards," essentially big white or silver panels that reflect sunlight on to the subject.

maggie949

BANNED

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 10:30 AM

#24

A friend shared this thread.

The technical details are intriguing.

What model was your old phone?

Do you still have it?

When a file is deleted it is removed from the file table, but the data can stay on disk until the space is overwritten.

Search up android undelete.

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 2:10 PM

#25

On July 9, 2026 at 10:30 AM maggie949 said:

What model was your old phone?

BLU Vivo 6.

On July 9, 2026 at 10:30 AM maggie949 said:

Do you still have it?

I do actually. I never know what to do with e-waste so it just kinda piles up. What do I do to undelete things? Do you think anything from before it reset would still be around?

maggie949

BANNED

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 2:21 PM

#26

On July 9, 2026 at 2:10 PM lincoln1988 said:

What do I do to undelete things?

You need to root it. XDA forums are a useful resource. Here is a guide:

<https://xdaforums.com/t/root-twrp-qmobile-z14-gionee-s6-pro-blu-vivo-6-allview-x3-soul-plus.3483000/>

Connect phone to desktop and use adb bridge to perform partition dump to file:

<https://android.stackexchange.com/a/208114>

Get CGSecurity PhotoRec and use it to scan the partition dump:

<https://forums.androidcentral.com/threads/guide-recovering-deleted-files.500142/>

You can PM for support.

maggie949

BANNED

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 2:28 PM

#27

On July 9, 2026 at 2:10 PM lincoln1988 said:

Do you think anything from before it reset would still be around?

It is possible but no guarantee.

maggie949

BANNED

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 2:58 PM

#28

Wait. @lincoln1988 Wait stop actually.

Don't follow those instructions from before they're not a good idea.

That's a big mistake sorry.

Those instructions could cause whatever data remains to be overwritten so do not do it.

This is a very fragile situation.

The best solution is to remove the NAND flash and put inside a chip reader and dump out all the data directly. There's a chip reader in storage over here somewhere.

You will receive a private message.

1

julies
Neophyte

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 8:07 PM

#29

Just replying so that when Nightmare Expo makes a video about this I'll get to be in the screenshots.

4

1

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Thursday July 9, 2026 at 9:22 PM

#30

Just so people know, maggie949 graciously offered to do professional data recovery on my old phone. She even offered to pay for shipping and sent me a pre-paid shipping label. Thank you Maggie! I sent it out today.

5

3

1

1

Friday July 10, 2026

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Friday July 10, 2026 at 2:29 AM

#31

Hey folks, I'm just going to sleep for the night. I won't be around at all tomorrow because I'll be moving all-day. I'll try to give an update once I'm settled in.

3

packrat
Village Idiot

Friday July 10, 2026 at 4:58 AM

#32

Godspeed.

On July 9, 2026 at 8:48 AM Reggie42 said:

Packrat's and Aadarsh's ideas about televisions or banners in front of the window, that won't work. The TV or banner would need to emitting a lot of light to be lighting up the room so well.

"How often have I said to you that when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth?"

Yours,
Packrat

Every jumbled pile of person has a thinking part that wonders what the part that isn't thinking isn't thinking of

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Friday July 10, 2026 at 5:15 PM

 #33

I figured out a way to stitch the frames of the video together into a panorama. its not easy since there's no actual window overlap between them. the desk chair and monitor are blocking things in a very inconvenient way. I have to guess by lining up what's above the chair in one frame with what's behind the mug in the second.

and here's a gif of the frames adding up over time:

100 5 3 1

you can see that even though there's no overlap, the pieces sorta fit together like a jigsaw puzzle.

Reggie42
Wanderer

Friday July 10, 2026 at 5:28 PM

#34

Very cool @lesser_weevil! Thanks!

1

Understair
Acolyte

Friday July 10, 2026 at 5:37 PM

#35

Thanks Weevil. I've felt like I've been the only one in this thread who can't see the spinning as easily as everyone else. Your illustrations help quite a lot.

1

AadarshVarma
Neophyte

Friday July 10, 2026 at 6:20 PM

#36

It just hit me that you can record video on a phone without unlocking it. You mentioned you couldn't unlock your phone in your dream so I guess maybe you did the next best thing.

Understair
Acolyte

Friday July 10, 2026 at 10:16 PM

#37

I was staring at Weevil's panorama off-and-on all night and I think I've found an inconsistency.

If you look carefully at the way light is falling on the objects around the window, you can almost see where the direction of the sun is. It seems to me that somewhere between frames 4 and 5, the window is pointing toward the sun.

Then I went and looked up where the position of the sun was in Springfield at the day and time the video was allegedly taken.

I measured out the distance between the sun and each cardinal direction. It's 1/6th of the distance between south and east, which comes to 15 degrees off the eastward direction.

Next I took Taylor's map of the neighborhood and drew on the direction the sun would be coming from in red. As you can see, it doesn't seem to line up with the direction of the sun implied by the video itself, which seems to be directly south-east.

I admit that the panorama only gives a rough estimate, but if we just look at frame 6, the frame where the sun should be pointing straight into the room, there seems to be a little bit of sunlight caught on the lip of the trash bin in the lower left corner. That wouldn't be possible unless the sun is coming in at an angle.

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Friday July 10, 2026 at 10:31 PM

#38

wow great work understair! I agree with your analysis here, the sun direction is contradictory. we'll see what taylor says when she gets back tomorrow.

btw what software did you use to look up the sun direction?

Understair
Acolyte

Friday July 10, 2026 at 10:36 PM

 #39

Thanks! I used Stellarium: <https://stellarium-web.org/>

1

Saturday July 11, 2026

lincoln1988
Neophyte

 Sunday July 12, 2026 at 3:39 PM

 #40

Hello again. Just finished settling in.

My roommates got a total kick out of the story. I put on quite the show for them. We loaded up my forum post on the living room television and I scrolled through the thread, showing off the pictures, animations, diagrams, and all you lovely people's comments.

Once I was done my presentation we had an impromptu investigation session. The lot of us crowded into the old room, making picture frames with our fingers, running around inside and outside trying to match-up what we could see in the video. We found some minor issues with the diagram I posted earlier, but it's mostly correct.

The most persuasive theory from this thread was the idea that yard workers outside were moving things around in a way that just-so-happened to look like the house was spinning. Jamie wracked his brain, trying to remember if the neighbours were doing landscaping that year, but he wasn't sure. Paula liked the "dream war" idea.

For the rest of the weekend people would reference my dream and make jokes about it. It was fast becoming just another weird tale in the house's lore. I really missed living with these goofballs.

One of my housemates was living in the room for a bit while I was gone, so I asked him if he'd ever had the spinning dream, but he said no. Instead he told me about his own heat-induced stress dream. He only ever had it once, but in this dream he was running around roman aqueducts trying to find shade. There were hundreds and hundreds of these aqueducts zigging around, crossing over and under one another. And yet he couldn't find a single place that was shaded from the blisteringly bright sun. When he finally woke up he was in a pool of sweat with the sun in his face. From that point forward, he said, he made a point to lower the blinds before going to sleep.

Jamie wasn't sure what to make of the video generally, but he did have an idea about how it and the other images survived. I asked him to write it down so I wouldn't misrepresent him:

"My bet is that your old BLU phone was generating thumbnails for all your pics and videos and saving them to a hidden folder. Probably its own photos app was generating the thumbs for the list of pictures. The Samsung didn't know that the NFRAMETHUMB folder should be hidden, so it copied them over."

I'm about to go to sleep in my room again for the first time. I don't actually want to have the dream so I've got the blinds closed. I'll update you all on my dreams as I have them.

-Taylor

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Saturday July 11, 2026 at 2:17 AM

#41

@Understair I just read your post about the sun direction being inconsistent. Sorry I think this is because my map is wrong. The compass in the corner isn't accurate, I only drew it that way because it was easier for me to draw straight lines. In truth the street grid is tilted at an angle, so the road is not going west-to-east but actually more southwest-to-northeast. You'll have to rotate the map counter-clockwise. Or rotate just the compass clockwise, then it should work out.

yolololo
Neophyte

Saturday July 11, 2026 at 2:57 AM

#42

send pictures of the room and the view outside the room. and pictures of the outside of the house.

packrat
Village Idiot

 Saturday July 11, 2026 at 4:57 PM

 #43

Every jumbled pile of person has a thinking part that wonders what the part that isn't thinking isn't thinking of

1

Understair
Acolyte

Saturday July 11, 2026 at 10:02 AM

 #44

Thanks for the clarification Taylor! I think that resolves my inconsistency.

On July 11, 2026 at 2:11 AM lincoln1988 said:

There were hundreds and hundreds of these aqueducts zigging around, crossing over and under one another.

I just want to say I love this imagery. This is a place I'd love to explore, assuming I won't end up with heat stroke.

Also, @packrat I think you're being too conspiratorially minded. If you believe there is an enemy around every corner you're more likely to hurt a friend. It's probably just a misunderstanding?

AadarshVarma
Neophyte

Saturday July 11, 2026 at 12:14 PM

 #45

Wow wild update. @lincoln1988 Did you have any dreams? Keep us posted.

maggie949

BANNED

Saturday July 11, 2026 at 12:39 PM

#46

Taylor's phone arrived today.

The NAND flash chip was successfully removed from the phone without any damage.

Before the data dump can proceed it needs a socket adapter for the T48 programmer.

The adapter was purchased a few days ago but is still on its way. Tracking says it should be delivered on the 14th.

After that it shouldn't take too long to backup the entire contents of the phone for study. An update will be shared once this is done.

100 4

🕶️ 1

❤️ 1

maggie949

BANNED

Saturday July 11, 2026 at 12:53 PM

#47

On July 11, 2026 at 2:11 AM lincoln1988 said:

"My bet is that your old BLU phone was generating thumbnails for all your pics and videos and saving them to a hidden folder. Probably its own photos app was generating the thumbs for the list of pictures. The Samsung didn't know that the NFRAMETHUMB folder should be hidden, so it copied them over."

This is the most likely reason yes.

A hidden folder's name should be prefixed with a dot, but standard Unix convention is often ignored by mobile phone developers.

ptrelemm

Neophyte

 Saturday July 11, 2026 at 4:56 PM

#48

⚠ Deleted post

😏 2

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Saturday July 11, 2026 at 2:03 PM

#49

On July 11, 2026 at 12:14 PM AadarshVarma said:

Wow wild update. @lincoln1988 Did you have any dreams? Keep us posted.

Hey sorry. I just woke up. No update to report, I didn't have any dreams last night.

👍 1

lincoln1988
Neophyte

 Saturday July 11, 2026 at 4:54 PM

#50

⚠ Deleted post

👤 3

😬 1

lincoln1988
Neophyte

 Saturday July 11, 2026 at 4:54 PM

#51

⚠ Deleted post

👤 3

Reggie42
Wanderer

 Saturday July 11, 2026 at 4:53 PM

 #52

 Deleted post

1

lincoln1988
Neophyte

 Saturday July 11, 2026 at 4:53 PM

 #53

 Deleted post

lesser_weevil
Librarian

 Saturday July 11, 2026 at 4:53 PM

 #54

 Deleted post

clay_anderseen
Archivist

 Sunday July 12, 2026 at 12:09 PM

 #55

Hello members. Unfortunately it seems that this thread has gone off the rails and has crossed the line in a few places. We have reached out to the OP and other members participating in this thread, and they have edited their posts to be in line with our policies.

I will remind you all of the following rules for the Anomalies board:

Rule 1 - Leave the Innocent Alone

Do not entangle innocent people in the anomaly you witnessed. It is OK to allude to "someone" or use pseudonyms where necessary, but be sparing and err on the side of caution. Even vague statements can, when collected together, be enough to doxx the person involved. It is a liability to the forum as a whole. We all saw the fallout with U&U season 6, so let's try our best not to let that happen again.

Rule 6 - Coincidence is Not Conspiracy

One of the most common "anomalies" shared turn out to just be the Baader-Meinhof phenomenon. Also known as the frequency illusion or recency bias, the Baader-Meinhof phenomenon is a cognitive bias where a person observes new words, concepts, or products with unusual frequency after they were initially noticed. A classic example is the "23 enigma," where the number 23 is believed to appear unusually often and with great significance. These are not anomalies, just quirks of the human brain.

Rule 11 - We're Not Your Therapists

The Anomalies board has a higher standard for relevance than our other boards. This is a place to investigate evidence and craft theories about their properties and mechanisms. Please stick to the facts of your case and do not veer into irrelevant details of your life. Leave venting to the General Discussion Board.

The original post was right on the line, but the thread seems to be getting more off-topic as it progresses. These seem to be innocent mistakes by someone not familiar with the rules overhaul in 2020, so I will not be delivering an infraction right now, but I will if the pattern continues.

Everyone else: Stay on topic. Stay skeptical. Refrain from speculating about specific people outside the thread. Thank you.

Sunday July 12, 2026

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Sunday July 12, 2026 at 6:32 PM

 #56

Hey folks, sorry about the previous posts. I had accidentally revealed too much identifying information, and so the posts had to be deleted.

I spoke with the mods and we agreed on the following update without revealing too much:

Hey everyone. I learned a possibly relevant detail from Jamie about the house. It turns out that he never purchased the house directly. Instead, he has rights to the house because it was built on land he purchased in a "tax sale" in 2008.

For those who don't know (because I didn't,) a tax sale is when the owner of a property hasn't been paying taxes, and so the government acquires the property and puts it up for auction to recover the cost.

So, Jamie purchased the lot at a state auction, but apparently the state's record of the land was out-of-date. In the early 2000s the lot boundaries in that subdivision were redrawn and no longer line up with the land Jamie purchased. The house, having been built after the redrawing, actually intersects with the old boundary that is on Jamie's deed.

That's all to say, the south-east corner of the house is outside of the land that Jamie owns. Which is precisely where my room is.

3

1

1

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Sunday July 12, 2026 at 6:40 PM

#57

thanks for the update taylor. I was around when the posts were still live so I got a look at the maps. one thing I noticed about the old and new plot, and I hope I'm allowed to point this out: the new plot looks like the old one if you rotated it anti-clockwise.

yolololo
Neophyte

Sunday July 12, 2026 at 7:11 PM

#58

pls take photos of the room and the house and out window

Understair
Acolyte

Sunday July 12, 2026 at 7:19 PM

#59

For those of us that missed it, could we get a sketch of what weevil is referring to? I would like to see, if that's alright.

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Sunday July 12, 2026 at 7:41 PM

#60

Hi sorry I'm going to be busy for the next two days to get my affairs in order. @Understair I'll let the mods decide if any of them are reading this.

3

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Sunday July 12, 2026 at 10:02 PM

#61

no worries taylor. I made a picture and ran it by clay, he said it would probably be fine to post. so here's what the old border looks like, using taylor's diagram from earlier:

the red line is the old border and the white fence is the new border. I don't have the deleted boundary maps so I can't line it up exactly, but this is the gist. I remember the corner cut past the fence and into the neighbor's property. taylor can add a thumbs up if she thinks it's accurate.

2

1

Monday July 13, 2026

yolololo
Neophyte

Monday July 13, 2026 at 12:11 AM

 #62

it takes 2 seconds to take pictures just do it

packrat
Village Idiot

On July 12, 2026 at 10:02 PM lesser_weevil said:

the red line is the old border and the white fence is the new border. I don't have the deleted boundary maps so I can't line it up exactly, but this is the gist. I remember the corner cut past the fence and into the neighbor's property. taylor can add a thumbs up if she thinks it's accurate.

I resent being the one to bring this up, because it will only exacerbate my reputation as the local conspiracy theorist, but we should at least consider ley lines. It's a minor ley, certainly, but the energies channeling through are so virulently potent that even our otherwise skeptical mods are spooked.

But more seriously, the fact that your bedroom is splayed across the border between two worlds is undeniably pregnant with meaning. One foot stands outside the auspices of your benefactor and in opposing territory. We call this a "salient" in battlefield terminology. The enemy will attempt to pinch you out.

Yours,
Packrat

Every jumbled pile of person has a thinking part that wonders what the part that isn't thinking isn't thinking of

lesser_weevil
Librarian

heya peeps. it's a long weekend for me so I started working on a project to annotate the features visible in my panorama with those in taylor's map. here's what I've got:

you can see I named all the visible trees T1, T2, T3, etc, and lined them up with the trees in Taylor's map. also the roads get the names R1 and R2.

while doing this I found some stuff that doesn't appear in the map. I gave these "features" names like F1, F2, F3, etc, and I've drawn what I think they are/where they are in red paintbrush. here's a description of those features from the image:

new features (in red)

(F1) - bush in front of south neighbor visible in bottom of frame 2

(F2) - fence visible along east side of road R2 visible in bottom of frame 5

(F3) - side of east neighbor house visible in frame 8 and 7. top left section of frame 7 possibly shows window on neighbor's siding

(F4) - house further east down road R1, behind the car, visible in frame 6

these are in order of how confident I am. the F1 bush is obvious from the frame. for F3 and F4 I 100 5 2 1 1 things that aren't there after squinting at the images for so long.
what do you all think?

On July 12, 2026 at 3:39 PM lincoln1988 said:

We found some minor issues with the diagram I posted earlier, but it's mostly correct.

any chance you could share the issues you found @lincoln1988? I'm curious if they're the same as the ones I found.

concrete
Wanderer

Monday July 13, 2026 at 2:41 PM

#65

Man I didn't think this thread could get any better but we've got weevil out here making fuckin' conspiracy theory diagrams. Awesome stuff dude you're a legend.

My threads, discussions, and other projects:

- Concrete's Curated List of Matrix Glitches
- Photoshop Tennis Thread
- Concrete's Web Zone

1

Understair
Acolyte

Monday July 13, 2026 at 4:39 PM

#66

Very cool Weevil!

I feel that the fence you point out makes more sense going horizontally along R1 instead of vertically along R2. I've been thinking that the geometry looks a little weird between frame 5 and 6. Maybe the fence is closer to the house, and this is a parallax effect?

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Monday July 13, 2026 at 5:21 PM

#67

yeah ~~@Understair~~ my confidence in the fence and the other features aside from F1 is pretty low. knowing the distance these features are from the house is basically impossible because there's no overlap between the frames. if there was, we could do some sorta trigonometry to get an estimate for the distance.

maggie949
BANNED

Monday July 13, 2026 at 11:41 PM

#68

The adapter arrived early and the data dump was fully successful.

The entire 64 GB of the phone's internal memory is now sitting safe and sound on an SSD and backed up to cloud storage.

After putting the disk image into PhotoRec, it came up with lots of results of previously deleted files. But none of them were the spinning house video.

Either it is not there or need to hunt harder.

There are some other techniques that can be used to recover deleted files. It will take some days to try them.

Tuesday July 14, 2026

drinkyborb
Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 1:09 AM

#69

Crazy thread so far. Excited to see where this goes! 🎉 🐦

lincoln1988

Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 10:20 AM

#70

Hey everyone, I just had maybe the worst dream of my life. I'm not sure if it is relevant or useful, but I thought I'd might as well post it.

In my head I call these "two at once dreams." I don't know if anyone else has dreams like this. There's "World A" and "World B" and events are happening simultaneously in both. Projected over each other like a double exposure. Or like I'm seeing A from my left eye and B from my right. It's hard to explain. But both are real. One isn't more real than the other.

In World A I'm having the house-spinning dream again. Lying in bed, staring at the window. But it's clear almost immediately that things are going to be different. There are tons of workers outside wearing bright orange construction vests, and they're all scratching their hard-hats trying to figure out how to stop the house.

Meanwhile, in World B, I'm in a huge empty parking lot. This empty expanse of pitch-black asphalt, illuminated by a grid of thin grey street lights. There's a black tie event happening for some reason, with people milling about in beautifully dark clothes and pecking at charcuterie boards. I'm under the impression that I'm here to entertain. I'm in an all-white outfit. White shoes, white stockings, white dress, little white headband, just waltzing this-way-and-that. Twirling like a top between the partygoers.

So, there's something wrong with these people. It's like they're clay. Every time they touch they become one. They merge, messily. A handshake squelches flesh together into a bouquet of fingers. A kiss on a cheek is stuck fast. But hey no worries we're all having a good time. It's a happy night for these creeps. There's a dancer here to entertain. And I do my best to avoid them. I don't want to be merged.

Back at the house the workers are scheming. They've hooked a boat anchor onto the eavestrough and are heaving-and-hohing to slow it down. It doesn't help, so they start tossing life preservers onto the chimney like it's a carnival game. Finally they throw one end of garland at the house and it catches on my window. I watch as it slowly wraps around the house, criss-crossing over the window for each turn.

In World B it's getting harder to avoid those plasticine partygoers. They've merged into a big ring, holding hands (or torsos, or skulls) in a big ring-around-the-rosie. It's hard to avoid them because I keep spinning. I make the mistake of grabbing onto a street light. Left hand wraps around the pole, and my right is there to meet it. My hands merge together around the pole and I'm stuck. Spinning around the maypole.

World A. The garland is covering the house. This big long chain of fake plastic pine fronds is wrapping around our house and squeezing it tighter. Squeezing out the air. The house is deflating with me inside, and the garland has nowhere to go but to tangle around me. I'm the one spinning now. A bobbin collecting thread. I look like a Christmas tree. There's nothing left of me but a Christmas tree.

World B. The street light pole is gone. The party's over. I'm alone with my white shoes tapping across the black asphalt under the open starry sky with my wrists fused together. Hands are numb. Twirling twirling twirling under light-trails is this spinning dancer never stopping even without her audience. Even alone I'm not going to stop.

From World A I could see into World B and the other way around and around. Why do people chop down Christmas trees in summer? What's a dancer without an audience? When is this going to end?

The worst part was happening to my brain. It's not that I couldn't stop. I couldn't BRING MYSELF to stop. I couldn't CARE to stop it. Any resistance or even the thought of stopping sputtered and died in my mind. Even my personality was fading. What remained watched it all happen delirious at ten feet below and falling. Sick with the vision of a sick world in motion in the distance passing by to the right from north to west to south to east and back and back and back and back.

I woke from this, an hour ago, to my cold dark room.

A lot has been happening over here that I haven't been posting about.

I'm moving out again in a few days. I don't have anywhere to go but I'll probably be able to have to figure something out.

-Taylor

Reggie42
Wanderer

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 8:32 AM

#71

Taylor I'm sad to hear that you have to move out again! I hope things go OK for you. If you are ever near Pensacola give me a ring. You seem like a good honest guy sorry life has been unfair to you.

AadarshVarma
Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 9:58 AM

#72

Creepy dream. I can't say I've ever had two at once like that. I have to ask, could you check your phone for any new videos? Pictures?

I hope you're able to find a new place quickly. 🙏

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 10:15 AM

 #73

No new pictures or videos.

clay_anderseen
Archivist

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 10:26 AM

 #74

@lincoln1988, this is your last warning. I've edited your post to remove the problematic details. Please review the rules I have already called attention to. Thanks.

lincoln1988
Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 10:43 AM

 #75

Sorry. It won't ever happen again.

Understair
Acolyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 12:22 PM

 #76

On July 14, 2026 at 10:20 AM lincoln1988 said:

In my head I call these "two at once dreams." I don't know if anyone else has dreams like this.

I've had dreams like that. Sometimes there's three at once. I thought I was the only person who had them, too. They always remind me of A and B plots in television shows.

Dodekaeder
Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 1:22 PM

 #77

Hello everyone. I have been following these updates from Reddit, but I have a question so I have dusted off my old forum account. Why exactly cannot @lincoln1988 share better pictures of the area this anomaly took place? As a few have pointed out, it gets in the way of our ability to study the case. Actually myself I was interested in rebuilding the scene in Metabunk's "Sitrec" tool.

yolololo
Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 1:56 PM

 #78

ive been saying this the entire time and I keep asking but everyone keeps ignoring me

concrete
Wanderer

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 2:11 PM

 #79

Here we go again...

My threads, discussions, and other projects:

- Concrete's Curated List of Matrix Glitches
- Photoshop Tennis Thread
- Concrete's Web Zone

Understair
Acolyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 3:30 PM

 #80

On July 14, 2026 at 1:22 PM Dodekaeder said:

Why exactly cannot @lincoln1988 share better pictures of the area this anomaly took place?

This question was answered earlier in the thread. Basically, it is too easy to determine where a photo was taken these days. The mods have a PSA here about how seemingly innocuous images can be easily used to pinpoint someone's location using readily available online tools. For instance, If any house in the neighborhood was previously listed on Zillow then a simple Google Lens reverse-image search can find it and report the address.

yolololo
Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 3:56 PM

#81

ok but this is a pretty important anomaly. this can be famous if it is real but @lincoln1988 needs to show us the room and other houses so people can investigate and certify that its real. if I were you @lincoln1988 I would go public immediately. having an anomaly certified is more important than my privacy so I would go public immediately. nobody cares about anyones private stuff anyway.

lizpony
✧ Guardian ✧

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 5:10 PM

#82

@yolololo: Please stop pressuring forum members into breaking forum rules. We have rules against revealing personally identifying information for important reasons. Please read our Forum Rules page for an explanation of the rules and why they exist. If you continue this behavior we will have to take disciplinary action.

yolololo
Neophyte

Tuesday July 14, 2026 at 7:13 PM

#83

ok fine I'm just trying to say that information wants to be free and that we need to be able to get all the information so we can figure out the truth. if this is real then all the information will get out some day anyway might as well do it now. that's it that's all I'm trying to say.

Wednesday July 15, 2026

packrat
Village Idiot

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 4:58 AM

#84

Don't get distracted, people. The woman has questions. Let's answer them.

On July 14, 2026 at 10:20 AM lincoln1988 said:

Why do people chop down Christmas trees in summer?

Certainly not for kindling.

On July 14, 2026 at 10:20 AM lincoln1988 said:

What's a dancer without an audience?

Practicing

On July 14, 2026 at 10:20 AM lincoln1988 said:

When is this going to end?

When you win.

Yours,
Packrat

Every jumbled pile of person has a thinking part that wonders what the part that isn't thinking isn't thinking of

maggie949

BANNED

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 12:59 PM

#85

Success.

The video has been recovered. Or what's left of it.

It was found by some custom python code to match H264 I-frames.

It's a finicky method but it paid off. The code caught three videos PhotoRec did not.

Making the videos watchable required transplanting MP4 headers from an existing video onto the recovered video stream.

Doing so also gave the AAC audio stream, since the field offsets are the same.

The original filenames are lost but it is obviously the same video. This should be MOV1080160020230806082304.mp4

Video is very corrupted because there's a scattershot pattern of zeroed bytes in the payload.

This is highly unusual. Usually data loss happens in large contiguous blocks. Not like this... Irradiation.

Attached.

Attachments (1)

 MOV1080160020230806082304-recovery5-out.mp4 (3.88 MB)

100

6

2

1

1

1

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 7:42 AM

 #86

wow, incredible! and creepy! it doesn't feel like we're meant to be seeing this. I watched this three times before I realized there was sound. you have to turn your volume up. I can't tell what they're saying but there's definitely voices.

I'd love to dig into this after work. I could do a frame-by-frame. is there any way to fix some of the glitching?

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 7:56 AM

 #87

On July 15, 2026 at 7:42 AM lesser_weevil said:

you have to turn your volume up.

ack! remember to turn your volume back down! I nearly jumped out of my skin when I started watching a youtube video and got blasted in the ears with a nordvpn sponsor read. 🤪

maggie949

BANNED

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 8:24 AM

 #88

On July 15, 2026 at 7:42 AM lesser_weevil said:

is there any way to fix some of the glitching?

No. This is the best that can be done.

Understair
Acolyte

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 11:09 AM

 #89

Welp. That rules out my theory that the video was a time lapse.

I think it is still possible that all this is just movement outside the window. The video is so corrupted it's hard to see what is going on. Though, if I squint I finally can see the black car that passes by right before we zoom in. So that's something I guess.

I listened to the audio very carefully a few times. Aside from the yelling, I think I hear a doorbell? I'm not sure. I wonder if anyone with audio editing skills can make the audio clearer.

Thanks for posting this.

Reggie42
Wanderer

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 11:42 AM

#90

WOW! Amazing work @maggie949!

On July 15, 2026 at 11:09 AM Understair said:

I wonder if anyone with audio editing skills can make the audio clearer.

I could give it ago! There's some neat software I've been meaning to try for audio.

100

2

1 clay_anderseen

Archivist

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 12:43 PM

#91

@maggie949 My AI agent flagged your post as a potential security issue because of the video you embedded. Here's what it had to say:

Suspicious video src.

The URL used by a `<video>` tag in this thread is a potential vulnerability:

```
<video controls src="https://groupfiles3.zones.meinelieblingstiere.corp/~maggie105/cases/2026/spinnin recovery5-out.mp4"></video>
```

Analysis of the URL:

The URL's domain is `groupfiles3.zones.meinelieblingstiere.corp` which is not a well-known file host or content delivery network. Instead, this domain is most likely owned and controlled by an individual or group with potentially malicious intentions.

Additionally, the domain has two levels of subdomains which is highly unusual and suspicious, increasing the scrutiny that it should be given.

Why this is important:

Forum members who access this thread will automatically send a request to the attacker-controlled domain. This has the potential to de-anonymize members by exposing their IP addresses and approximate GeolP location.

I have removed the video embed from your post. Please use the forum's file attachment feature or upload it to a video sharing website like YouTube instead.

maggie949

BANNED

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 12:57 PM

 #92

...Okay

eggbuoy

Boatman

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 1:33 PM

 #93

Wow fucking amazing footage! This is the real deal. Also what the hell happened to this thread? Why are there so many deleted posts?

The risk I took was calculated, but man, am I bad at math.

yolololo

Neophyte

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 2:53 PM

 #94

more bad evidence. meh.

Reggie42

Wanderer

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 4:16 PM

 #95

Hi everyone! Here's a cleaned-up audio file from the video. It sounds a lot better and you can actually make out the voice. I can clearly hear her say "I can't get inside" at 7 seconds in.

Spooky! Thoughts?

Attachments (1)

 MOV1080160020230806082304-recovery5-out_AdobePodcast.mp3 (1.27 MB)

 2

 1

 1

 1 eggbuoy

Boatman

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 4:22 PM  #96

That's a big improvement! Super cool stuff. If you listen closely there are two or three other voices.

The risk I took was calculated, but man, am I bad at math.

eggbuoy
Boatman

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 4:31 PM  #97

A man is saying "please stop it now" at 10 seconds.

The risk I took was calculated, but man, am I bad at math.

eggbuoy
Boatman

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 4:36 PM  #98

A voice from 13 seconds in is saying "it is falling apart (at the) seams."

The risk I took was calculated, but man, am I bad at math.

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 4:47 PM

#99

sorry but I'm doubtful those voices are real. the filename contains the words "AdobePodcast" which is iirc an AI tool. the audio is so low quality, these are probably hallucinations triggered by the glitchy sound. sorry.

2

1

Understair
Acolyte

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 5:09 PM

#100

I agree with Weevil, I don't think we can trust this. It turns the part I'm pretty sure was a ringing doorbell into a person moaning "Oooohhh." Also, I can't hear anything eggbuoy is claiming to hear in the original audio. But I wasn't able to see the car at first so maybe I'm just bad at seeing things.

1

Reggie42
Wanderer

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 5:47 PM

#101

Hey guys sorry about that we're all new at this AI stuff. It might not be totally accurate but it might still be informative anyway.

concrete
Wanderer

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 7:01 PM

#102

HOLY SHIT DUDE! THIS IS THE MOTHERLOAD!

Even though its super corrupted you can totally see the outside moving. And the car?! You can see the car pass by 10 seconds in. Holy moley. Excited to see what @lesser_weevil does with this.

My threads, discussions, and other projects:

- Concrete's Curated List of Matrix Glitches
- Photoshop Tennis Thread
- Concrete's Web Zone

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Wednesday July 15, 2026 at 9:25 PM

#103

On July 15, 2026 at 7:01 PM concrete said:

Excited to see what @lesser_weevil does with this.

looks like it will have to wait until tomorrow evening, got some family stuff to take care of.

2

1

Thursday July 16, 2026

packrat
Village Idiot

Thursday July 16, 2026 at 4:58 AM

#104

On July 15, 2026 at 7:42 AM lesser_weevil said:

it doesn't feel like we're meant to be seeing this.

Because we're not. The universe abhors a gap in its strict and cunning ruleset. The only evidence we'll ever get for an anomaly is the plausibly deniable. The "real deal" is never going to happen.

We should be satisfied with what little we manage to get. It is not a surprise to me that the video is riddled with wormholes and barnacles like some decrepit undersea treasure. I applaud you, Maggie, for fighting a battle against the world and wrenching this prize from its clutches. Let's hope it's the right battle and the right prize.

Yours,
Packrat

Every jumbled pile of person has a thinking part that wonders what the part that isn't thinking isn't thinking of

AadarshVarma
Neophyte

Thursday July 16, 2026 at 12:11 PM

 #105

@lincoln1988 Any updates from you?

Understair
Acolyte

Thursday July 16, 2026 at 12:54 PM

 #106

I noticed on Taylor's profile that she hasn't been seen online since her last post. I hope she's doing ok.

OOPSNOPOOPS
BANNED

 Thursday July 16, 2026 at 5:31 PM

 #107

-  3
-  2
-  2
-  1
-  1
-  1

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Thursday July 16, 2026 at 4:13 PM

#108

fuck me. well, it's been fun guys. see you in the next one.

yolololo
Neophyte

Thursday July 16, 2026 at 4:24 PM

#109

who could've predicted this? lol

4

1

AadarshVarma
Neophyte

Thursday July 16, 2026 at 5:11 PM

#110

What is this..?

lesser_weevil
Librarian

Thursday July 16, 2026 at 5:19 PM

#111

season six. :(

I pinged clay and liz on discord. thread's probably gonna get locked/shutdown. fuck.

clay_anderseen
Archivist

Thursday July 16, 2026 at 6:21 PM

#112

Sigh.

Seems what I was afraid of happening has finally happened.

I deleted the post and banned the user, but given that they called out both KF and /x/ I'm sure there are plenty more bottom feeders waiting in the wings.

This thread is becoming a liability to the forum as a whole. It is getting a lot more off-site traffic than I'm comfortable with and we can clearly see the results of that here.

For that reason I've decided to lock and delist this thread from the main board. I'm sorry to see it have to go this way, but this has become necessary.

 5

 3

Sunday July 19, 2026

maggie949
BANNED

 Sunday July 19, 2026 at 6:19 PM

 #113

clay_anderseen
Archivist

Sunday July 19, 2026 at 6:31 PM

 #114

@maggie949 seriously? I have no idea how you made a post on a locked thread. But whatever. I don't care. Banned. I'm sick of having to deal with this shit.

114 Messages | Last message on July 19, 2026 at 6:31 PM | Thread locked on July 16, 2026 at 5:33 PM

▶  What's new - September 2026 (Click me!)

guest

 This thread is locked!

Write your reply...

You must be logged in to post a reply.

Community platform powered by Suricrasia Online copyleft 2017-2026

► Credits, attribution, and behind-the-scenes.